

Michael Graham

Michael Graham has to be the only person on Earth to open for Bill Maher, Chris Rock and Sarah Palin.

A native of Lexington County, SC, radio talk host Michael Graham has spent nearly his entire life in front of a mic. He started in college as a stand-up comic, spending six years on the national circuit performing with stars like Jerry Seinfeld, Jeff Foxworthy and the aforementioned Chris Rock.

Then Michael's career took an unexpected turn toward politics, working as a GOP political consultant on campaigns from Chicago to the Carolinas. As a result, he became a frequent guest on FOX/CNN/MSNBC, including several appearances on Bill Maher's "Politically Incorrect" and "Real Time" TV shows.

Michael began his talk radio career at WBT-AM in Charlotte. After stints in Washington DC, Boston and Atlanta, Graham transitioned to print media, first at the Weekly Standard magazine and now as politics editor for InsideSources.

The author of four books, including the first major publisher book on the Tea Party movement — "THAT'S NO ANGRY MOB, THAT'S MY MOM!" (Regnery, 2010) — Michael is also a columnist for the Boston Herald.

Graham provides political analysis for CBSN and also edits New Hampshire Journal, covering the First In The Nation primary in the Granite State.
